

The two parties are in control, but the Political process is how we should be managing our government.

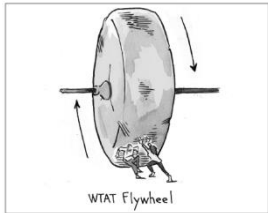

Gerrymandering and the need to deliver a return for all those who fund campaigns is dividing the nation and we are approaching a breaking point.

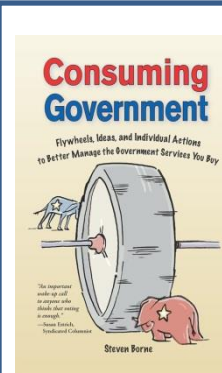

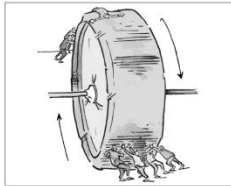

The Way Things Are Today works great for those with the money, but moving up is getting harder for everyone else.

The individual feels powerless to make a difference, the system is too entrenched or too big for any of us to make a difference.

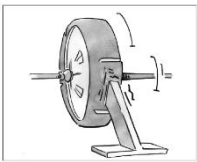

No one needs to do a lot, but we all need to do a little. There is no one panacea and we all don't have to be in sync. However, we must all chose to be better Consumers of all the Government we buy.

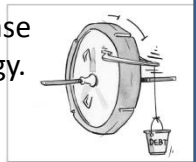

We start locally and develop the skills and the mindset to be better consumers of our Government. Consuming Government explains how we got here and ideas for getting people engaged.

Anything we do to pull back on Brakes, like the Broken Business of Medicine, Crime, puts more energy into our Economic Flywheel.

Reducing the weights our Economic Flywheel has to fight through, like the Debt, legal and insurance costs will increase economic energy.

Removing Sand from the axle, like the Do Nothing Congress, the big money, reducing apathy will make our economic flywheel more efficient.

Activities where we better manage our government and who we hire act as grease on the axle.
